REVISITING PARC DE LA VILLETTE

On a midsummer's afternoon in Paris' Parc de la Villette locals and tourists mingle amongst the famous red follies that dot the park. Children paddle in a shallow pool that surrounds one of the follies. Family groups and friends gather at tented cafés and bars that have sprouted up alongside one another. Strolling couples take in the sun, cyclists weave along the banks of the canal, while the distant din of an impromptu football match thickens the atmosphere. It is an evidently multicultural scene. Many women are dressed in strongly coloured and patterned fabrics of distant places, others wear hijabs. Some men wear kaftans, while many teens and children wear football strips bearing the names of global stars of the game such as Zidane, Ronaldo and Drogba. Security men
